“If you’re going to work with me, you have to listen to me. And you can’t just listen with your ears, or it will go to your head too fast. You have to listen with your whole body. If you listen slow, with your whole self, some of what I say will enter your heart.”

~ Christine Mayer

Living Life Your Way through self-directed services and supports.

Self-Direction is about people being at the centre of determining what they need and how services should work for them. It is underpinned by fundamental principles and key characteristics:

Self-Directed Principles

1. You are an expert in your own life and decide what will help you live well
2. You choose the ways that will best support you.
3. You have the right to choose how much responsibility you take with arranging and directing your supports and services.
4. You know what funding and resources you have and have control over how these are used to the extent that you choose to do so.
5. You are central in guiding the service arrangement and in planning and developing your own supports so you can live independently connected with the community.

Characteristics of Self-Direction

Independent living – I have a right to live my life in a way that makes sense to me.

Entitlement – I have a right to enough support and a right not to be over supported.

Self-determination – I have a right to make decisions about how I live my life and, if needed, I have a right to be supported by people who know me and love me to make those decisions for and with me.

Transparency – I have a right to be told clearly and simply how the system of entitlement works and how the rules affect me; including how much money I am entitled to for my support.

Choice – I have a right to use my money in any way that helps me to live my life; including the freedom to take risks, make mistakes and learn from them.
