

Leading Culture Change

Presented by: Kate Fulton

Leading Culture Change- “the way we (an organisation) are and how we behave and act together”.

Many good reasons exist for seeking to understand the culture of an organisation. It is particularly important where significant change is required.

Over the last year WAIS has worked with a number of Providers and people who are engaging their own support to identify critical elements that create a successful organisational culture – elements that support person centred practice.

This workshop will share this learning and support participants to understand their current culture and identify strategies to shape and influence the culture to be the kind that recognises and values staff who deliver excellent support and services.

The Leading Culture Change workshop aims to provide organisations with a framework and tools for assessing and understanding organisational culture as well as designing interventions to build and manage organisational cultures that best fit the change agenda.

This workshop is for people who have some responsibility for steering the organisation into the future, including navigating and responding to people and families in an individualised context.

Call WAIS 9485 1997 for further information.
