A heavily subsidised Support Provider Development Program for a limited number of Support Providers in Western Australia.

Be in a position to respond flexibly and creatively to people and families who are directing their own supports in the My Way & NDIA trial sites.

Funded by the Disability Services Commission and the National Disability Insurance Agency

Leading into the Future is a development program supported by the WA Disability Services Commission and the WA National Disability Insurance Agency to support Western Australian Support Providers to be in the best position possible to respond to people and families who are part of the NDIA trial and the My Way initiatives.

Leading into the Future program will be focused on Support Providers in the Lower South West, Cockburn, Kwinana and Perth Hills, WA as the trial sites for My Way and NDIA deliver their new approach to funding and providing support to people and families who experience disability and or mental ill health.

Leading into the Future is an opportunity for Support Providers to learn about responding to people and families in this new market - whilst having the support to test out approaches within their organisation with some expert support and advice.

Western Australia Individualised Services (WAI S) has been supporting Support Organisations for 4 years to develop person centred and individually tailored supports that are cost effective, viable in delivery and achieve the outcomes that people and families are looking for.

Leading into the Future delivery team includes KATE FULTON author and key contributor to the movement of Self Directed Support in the UK, LEANNE PEARMAN CEO WAI S and coaches with specific expertise
